Q55 Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experience, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question below about how you are feeling and instead check only the "none of the above" option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Q56 Please check all words that describe how you are currently feeling.

- Interested (1)
- Distressed (2)
- Excited (3)
- Upset (4)
- Strong (5)
- Guilty (6)
- Scared (7)
- Hostile (8)
- Enthusiastic (9)
- Proud (10)
- Irritable (11)
- Alert (12)

Q92 Thank-you. Now please proceed to the next page to answer a few questions about hypothetical situations between people in relationships ...

Q93 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q94 You and your partner decide to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved and decide to manage all the money, including your partner’s, as you feel they aren’t doing their share towards saving. So, you decide that your partner’s salary should go into this account, and you will manage the savings by giving a set amount money to them to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left after buying groceries to do anything else. However, you do not trust your partner and feel that they always want more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q95 In this situation, could you see yourself doing the same?

Q103 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q104 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and have even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into the relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner comments that they are still very invested in the relationship, you don't believe them. As a result you constantly tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they’ve chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. Every time your partner leaves the house, you make sure to tell them you might not be here when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you have threatened to hurt them if you find out they are cheating on you.

Q113 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q114 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home and is not answering her phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they’ve been? Why they didn’t answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and didn’t hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel this is not over yet because you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells and accuses you of not trusting them and of making things up in your head. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q123 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q124 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful, feeling very excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time and you remind them how much they'll enjoy having sex. You force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experience, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question below about how you are feeling and instead check only the "none of the above" option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Q56 Please check all words that describe how you are currently feeling.

Q92 Thank-you. Now please proceed to the next page to answer a few questions about hypothetical situations between people in relationships ...

Q93 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q94 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner’s, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money.
When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q103 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q104 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q114 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q123 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q124 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they'll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Q133 Thank you for participating in our study, you will now receive more information about the study, along with contact details if you require any further information or wish for your responses to be withdrawn from the project for any reason.
Appendix B: Information Sheet – Pilot, Study 1 and 2

Q1 Welcome!
Thank-you for choosing to take part in this study. We need your help in exploring the relationship between past childhood experiences, parental influences and relationships on domestic violence.

Who is Organising This Study?
This research is organised by the Psychology Department of the University of Kent. The researcher is Anita Ruddle, a PhD Student. The research supervisor is Eduardo Vasquez.

What Are the Aims of the Study?
This study aims to examine the impact of childhood experiences on domestic violent offending, considering how parents interact with each other, what personality characteristics may be more visible across individuals and how these experiences may have influenced how people behave towards their own boyfriends/girlfriends/partners in later life. As we are exploring the influence of childhood experiences, some questions are of a sensitive nature as individuals may have witnessed different types of conflicts between their parents and have had varying recollections of these interactions.

Study Duration?
This study should take approximately 30 minutes to complete.

Q2 Who Can Take Part?
- are over 18 years of age.
- are fluent English speakers.

Who Can Not Take Part?
- if they are younger than 18 years of age.
- if they do not speak English fluently.

What Happens to the Information I Provide?
Participation in this study guarantees confidentiality of the information you provide in line with the UK Data Protection Act 1998. Only researchers involved in the study and, if required, the body funding this research will be authorised to access the data. We will not ask you to write your name on the study materials. Instead we will ask you to create a unique participant identification number. Questionnaires will be stored in a securely locked room for as long as is required by the Data Protection Act. The data collected for this study will be used for a student project. Once the data is analysed a report of the findings may be submitted for publication. Only broad trends will be reported and it will not be possible to identify any individuals. A summary of the results will be available from the researcher on request.
Appendix C: Consent form for all the studies in this thesis

Q3 Volunteer Consent

Please read the following consent statements carefully and tick the confirmation box at the bottom of the page, which indicates that you fully consent to participate in this study.

I have been adequately informed about the nature of this study and received full information about my ethical rights as a participant and I have been given opportunity to ask questions. I fully understand that the decision to participate is up to me and that I can change my mind and withdraw from the study at any time without it affecting how I am treated in the future. I also understand that I am not obliged to answer any questions in this questionnaire that make me uncomfortable.

I have been guaranteed that all the information collected in this study is strictly confidential and will not bear any personal details that may identify me.

I have read the participant information and agree to take part in this study.

☐ Please tick to confirm the above (1)
Appendix D: Debriefing sheet – Pilot, Study 1, 2, 3 and 4

Debriefing for a study exploring the psychological motivations for engaging in domestic violence behaviour.

Thank you very much for your participation in this research. We would like to provide some further information about the purpose of the study and what we expect to find.

The purpose of our study is to explore a few reasons that may be related to domestic conflict, for example, whether parental conflict may affect an individual’s way of managing conflict in their own relationships in adulthood. We expect to find some interesting connections between an individual’s childhood experiences, their general temperament, how they think about certain events and how they justify the way they deal with conflict. It is important to reassure you that answering these questions does not mean we think you engage in aggressive behaviour. We apologise if some questions were rather sensitive. However, we hope you can understand why it is important to our study as participants do vary in their responses and all information gathered is very useful to impacting what we know about how people deal with conflict. If you do require any professional advice or assistance, as some of the material may have been very sensitive and reminded you of past experiences, or if you are a victim of domestic abuse and need help, please find below a selection of services available across the United Kingdom and the United States of America:

If you have any questions about the study or wish for your responses to be excluded from the study at any point please contact Anita Ruddle on ar420@kent.ac.uk. Additionally, please note all responses will be used only for the purposes of this project and will be kept confidential and will following the guidelines set out by the University of Kent Ethical Guidelines.

Thank-you again for your co-operation.

If you have any queries about this research or would like to ask any further questions, please contact the researcher or research supervisor using the contact details below.

If you would like to withdraw your data at any point, please contact the Psychology departmental office on 01227 823961. If you have been given a participant code you need to cite this. You do not have to give a reason for your withdrawal. Once again, we would like to thank you for your valuable contribution to this research. Your participation is greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,
Anita Ruddle

Q55 Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experience, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question below about how you are feeling and instead check only the "none of the above" option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Q56 Please check all words that describe how you are currently feeling.

- Interested (1)
- Distressed (2)
- Excited (3)
- Upset (4)
- Strong (5)
- Guilty (6)
- Scared (7)

Q92 Thank-you. Now please proceed to the next page to answer a few questions about hypothetical situations between people in relationships ...

Q93 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q94 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money.
When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q103 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q104 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q113 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q114 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time.
and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q123 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q124 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They're trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they'll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Q135 No matter how well a couple gets along, there are times when they disagree, get annoyed with the other person, want different things from each other, or just have spats or fights because they are in a bad mood, are tired, or for some other reason. Couples also have many different ways of trying to settle their differences. This is a list of things that might happen when you have differences.

Q246 Please select how many times you did each of these things in the past year, and how many times your partner did them in the past year. If you or your partner did not do one of these things in the past year, but it happened before that, select the last option.

Q768 Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experience, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question below about how you are feeling and instead check only the “none of the above”; option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Q760 Thank-you. Now please proceed to the next page to answer a few questions about hypothetical situations between people in relationships ...

Q672 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q673 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money. When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q682 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q683 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q692 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q693 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q702 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q703 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Q789 Recent research on decision making shows that choices are affected by context. Differences in how people feel, their previous knowledge and experience, and their environment can affect choices. To help us understand how people make decisions, we are interested in information about you. Specifically, we are interested in whether you actually take the time to read the directions; if not, some results may not tell us very much about decision making in the real world. To show that you have read the instructions, please ignore the question below about how you are feeling and instead check only the “none of the above”; option as your answer. Thank you very much.

Q694 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q695 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money. When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q704 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q705 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q715 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q724 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.
Q725 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Appendix H: Information sheet – Study 5 (Traditional Gender role beliefs, DV Proclivity, DV Myth Acceptance and Victim Blame)

Q1 Who is Organising This Study?

This research is organised by the Psychology Department of the University of Kent. The researcher is Anita Ruddle, PhD Student. The research supervisor is Dr. Eduardo Vasquez.

What Are the Aims of the Study?

This study intends to examine the psychological processes that may influence how individuals deal with conflict within their intimate relationships, considering how different people interpret situations depending on their personality or previous past experiences. As we are also exploring the influence of childhood experiences, some questions are of a sensitive nature as individuals may have witnessed different types of conflicts between their parents and have had varying recollections of these interactions.

Who Can Take Part?

The participation criteria includes; being 18 years or over and being a fluent English speaker. People who are in a relationship or have been in a relationship before.

Who Can Not Take Part?

Non-English speakers or are not over the age of 18 years old, have never been in a relationship before, or have participated in a study titled 'Answer a survey about your childhood experiences' or 'How childhood experiences and characteristics may influence how we deal with relationship conflict'.

What Happens to the Information I Provide?

Participation in this study guarantees confidentiality of the information you provide in line with the UK Data Protection Act 1998. Only researchers involved in the study...
and, if required, the body funding this research will be authorised to access the data. We will not ask you to write your name on the study materials. Instead we will ask you to create a unique participant identification number. Questionnaires will be stored in a securely locked room for as long as is required by the Data Protection Act. The data collected for this study will be used for a student project. Once the data is analysed a report of the findings may be submitted for publication. Only broad trends will be reported and it will not be possible to identify any individuals. A summary of the results will be available from the researcher on request.

Q782 Thank-you for participating in our study, you will now receive more information about the study, along with contact details if you require any further information or wish for your responses to be withdrawn from the project for any reason.

The purpose of our study is to explore a few reasons that may be related to domestic conflict, for example, whether parental conflict may affect an individual’s way of managing conflict in their own relationships in adulthood. We expect to find some interesting connections between an individual’s childhood experiences, their general temperament, how they think about certain events and how they justify the way they deal with conflict. We are also interested in exploring how individuals think about conflict and how they interpret issues that may arise in their intimate relationships. It is important to reassure you that answering these questions does not mean we think you engage in aggressive behaviour. We apologise if some questions were rather sensitive. However, we hope you can understand why it is important to our study as participants do vary in their responses and all information gathered is very useful to impacting what we know about how people deal with conflict. If you do require any professional advice or assistance, as some of the material may have been very sensitive and reminded you of past experiences, please find below a selection of services available across the United Kingdom and the United States of America:

End of Block: scenario instructions

Start of Block: Implicit Theory Scenario 1 & Qs.

Q47 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.
Q48 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money. When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q49 In this situation, could you see yourself doing the same?

Start of Block: Implicit Theory Scenario 2 & Qs.

Q57 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q58 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they’ve chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q67 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q68 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q77 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q78 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.
Q79 In this situation, could you see yourself doing the same?

Appendix K: Information sheet – Study 6 (the revised DVPPT for Dyslexia)

‘Perceptions we may form about our partners based on previous experiences’

Who is Organising This Study?

This research is organised by the Psychology Department of the University of Kent. The researcher is Anita Ruddle, a Postgraduate student.

What Are the Aims of the Study?

You are required to merely indicate whether a question is clear and easy to understand. You do not have to think about each question as far as the meaning behind it, only whether you would be able to answer it according to how it is phrased.

For more information about the study itself, if you are interested:

The purpose of this study is to examine different ways in which previous experiences may influence how we behave towards their intimate partners. We are interested in how different people interpret situations involving intimate partners and how they would explain certain behaviour. We are especially interested in whether or not you find the questions in this study clear and easy to understand and interpret. So, this study would involve you filling out one questionnaire. The study is conducted online so you can fill out the questionnaires wherever you have access to a computer and are able to not be disturbed. The information in this study will be anonymous and only the researcher will have access to it.

Who Can Take Part?
Individuals who are at least 18 years of age and have been in an intimate relationship before. Also if you have been diagnosed with a literacy skills condition such as dyslexia.

Who Can Not Take Part?

Anyone under the age of 18, who is not a fluent English speaker or who does not have difficulties with literacy, such as dyslexia cannot take part.

What Happens to the Information I Provide?

Participation in this study guarantees confidentiality of the information you provide in line with the UK Data Protection Act 1998. Only researchers involved in the study and, if required, the body funding this research will be authorised to access the data. We will not ask you to write your name on the study materials. Instead we will ask you to create a unique participant identification number. Questionnaires will be stored in a securely locked room for as long as is required by the Data Protection Act. The data collected for this study will form part of a student dissertation. Once the data is analysed a report of the findings may be submitted for publication. Only broad trends will be reported and it will not be possible to identify any individuals. A summary of the results will be available from the researcher on request.

Q128 Thank-you. Now please proceed to the next page to answer a few questions about hypothetical situations between people in relationships ...

Q41 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q42 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money.
DOMESTIC VIOLENCE PROCLIVITY AND PREDICTORS

When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q50 In this situation, how much would you agree that you have a need for taking control of the situation?
- Clear (1)
Q51 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q52 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q61 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q62 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q71 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q72 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Q93 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q94 You and your partner have decided to start saving for a house. After a few months of having a joint bank account, you notice that not much money has been saved. You both agree that you will manage all the money, including your partner's, as you feel they are not doing their share towards saving. So, it is decided that both your salaries will go into this account, and you will manage the savings by distributing a set amount money to each of you to spend each month. You realise that this leads to a lot of arguments, and your partner repeatedly says they do not have any money left to do anything else after buying groceries. However, you are not convinced as you feel that your partner always wants more money to spend on new clothes and other items that they don’t need. So you maintain control of the money. When you find some money they have stored away in an underwear draw you decide to take it and reduce their monthly allowance further.

Q103 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.
Q104 You have noticed that your partner has been going out a lot recently and has even started dressing differently. You start to feel that your partner is not investing enough time into your relationship, but when you express these concerns, you feel they are not taken seriously. You decide to tell your partner how silly they look before they go out in the hope they will change their mind, and go on to give them the silent treatment when they come home as you feel this is what they deserve for giving you so little attention. Even though your partner says they are still very much invested in the relationship, you have your doubts. So, you continue to tell them how ridiculous they look in the outfit they've chosen to wear and how their hairstyle makes them look unattractive. A few times when your partner is about to leave the house, you tell them you might not be home when they get back, or that the locks might be changed. On a number of occasions you comment that they will greatly regret it if you find out they have been cheating on you.

Q113. Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q114 You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you're making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q123. Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q124 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get algun times. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Q94 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

You and your partner have been living together for a while and have become accustomed to eating dinner together. One evening, you come home from work to find that your partner is not at home or answering their phone. You start to worry and when they get back you ask them where they have been and why they did not answer their phone? Your partner says they were out with friends, lost track of time and did not hear their phone ringing. You do not believe this, and you start asking more questions, which leads to a very heated argument. As your partner decides to walk away, you yank them back by the arm as you feel you are not getting any real answers to your questions. Your partner yells, accusing you of not trusting them and claiming that you’re making things up. You suddenly slap them across the face and leave the house.

Q104 Please read the following text carefully and imagine you and your partner in the situation presented.

Q105 You have been dating your partner for a while and decide to cook a romantic meal for you both. After dinner you start kissing and being more playful and getting increasingly excited at the thought of sleeping together. Your partner says “not tonight”, but you try to persuade them, insisting that it’s been a while since you’ve had sex. You ask your partner whether they still love you and why they are making excuses. You start being more seductive and passionate in your advances since you feel they just need a bit more encouragement. They’re trying to push you away, but you tell them that they should not play hard to get all the time. You remind them how much they’ll enjoy having sex; when this fails, you force yourself onto them and even though they’re not kissing back, you’re pretty sure they’re secretly enjoying it.

Appendix O: The Information and consent form – Final version for study 7 (the revised DVPPT for Dyslexia)

Information sheet and consent form

Welcome!

Thank-you for choosing to take part in this study. We need your help in ensuring our questionnaire is easily accessible to individuals who may have dyslexia or comparable literacy difficulties. In brief, the study aims to explore the relationship between past childhood experiences, parental influences, and conflict within relationships.

Who is Organising this Study?

This research is organised by the Psychology Department of the University of Kent. The researcher is Anita Ruddle, a PhD Student. The research supervisor is Dr. Jane Wood.

What Are the Aims of the Study?

The purpose of this study is to examine different ways in which previous experiences may influence how people behave towards intimate partners. We are interested in how different people interpret situations involving intimate partners and how they would explain certain behaviours. Therefore, there may be some questions of a sensitive nature as they ask about childhood experiences and present scenarios which include real-life events that may occur in intimate relationships. So, this study would involve you filling out one questionnaire. The study is conducted online so you can fill out the questionnaires wherever you have access to a computer and will not be disturbed. The information in this study will be anonymous and only the researcher will have access to it.

Study Duration?

This study should take approximately 20 minutes to complete.
Who Can Take Part?

- are over 18 years of age.
- are fluent English speakers.
- they have been diagnosed or are aware of having a literacy difficulty, specifically Dyslexia.

Who Can Not Take Part?

- if they are younger than 18 years of age.
- if they do not speak English fluently.
- are not aware of or do not hold a diagnosis for Dyslexia or a comparable literacy impairment.

What Happens to the Information I Provide?

Participation in this study guarantees confidentiality of the information you provide in line with the UK Data Protection Act 1998. Only researchers involved in the study and, if required, the body funding this research will be authorised to access the data. We will not ask you to write your name on the study materials. Instead we will ask you to use your Prolific Academic ID number, which will be used following any withdrawal requests. Questionnaires will be stored on a securely locked laptop for as long as is required by the Data Protection Act. The data collected for this study will be used for a student project. Once the data is analysed a report of the findings may be submitted for publication. Only broad trends will be reported and it will not be possible to identify any individuals. A summary of the results will be available from the researcher on request.

Volunteer Consent

Please read the following consent statements carefully and tick the confirmation box at the bottom of the page, which indicates that you fully consent to participate in this study. I have been adequately informed about the nature of this study and received full information about my ethical rights as a participant and I have been given opportunity to ask questions. I fully understand that the decision to participate is up to me and that I can change my mind and withdraw from the study at any time without it affecting how I am treated in the future. I also understand that I am not obliged to answer any questions in this questionnaire that make me uncomfortable. I have been guaranteed that all the information collected in this study is strictly confidential and will not bear any personal details that may identify me. I have read the participant information and agree to take part in this study.

Appendix P: The debriefing sheet – Pilot and final version for study 6 and 7 (the revised DVPPT for Dyslexia)

Debriefing for a study exploring the psychological motivations for engaging in domestic violence behaviour.

Thank you very much for your participation in this research. We would like to provide some further information about the purpose of the study and what we expect to find.

We are primarily interested in whether the questions within this questionnaire would be easily understood by individuals who have poor literacy skills or dyslexia. As, according to research, a great proportion of individual who go on and offend, have had a history of poor literary skills. In order for this scale to be used to assess and support these individuals, we needed your help.

Although you have not been asked to answer any of the questions, below is some information about what the questions would be able to give us information about.

The purpose of our study is to explore a few reasons that may be related to domestic conflict, for example, whether parental conflict may affect an individual’s way of managing conflict in their own relationships in adulthood. We expect to find some interesting connections between an individual’s childhood experiences, their general temperament, how they think about certain events and how they justify the way they deal with conflict. It is important to reassure you that answering these questions does not mean we think you engage in aggressive behaviour. We apologise if some questions were rather sensitive. However, we hope you can understand why it is important to our study as participants do vary in their responses and all information gathered is very useful to impacting what we know about how people deal with conflict. If you do require any professional advice or assistance, as some of the material may have been very sensitive and reminded you of past experiences, or if you are a victim of domestic abuse and need help, please find below a selection of services available across the United Kingdom and the United States of America:

If you have any questions about the study or wish for your responses to be excluded from the study at any point please contact Anita Ruddle on ar420@kent.ac.uk. Additionally, please note all responses will be used only for the purposes of this project and will be kept confidential and will following the guidelines set out by the University of Kent Ethical Guidelines. Thank-you again for your co-operation.

If you have any queries about this research or would like to ask any further questions, please contact the researcher or research supervisor using the contact details below.

If you would like to withdraw your data at any point, please contact the Psychology departmental office on 01227 823961. If you have been given a participant code you need to cite this. You do not have to give a reason for your withdrawal. Once again, we would like to thank you for your valuable contribution to this research. Your participation is greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

Anita Ruddle
