Acknowledgments

Many friends, colleagues, and organizations have contributed to this book. Thanks are owed to the British Academy for its generous postdoctoral fellowship, which provided time to think and funds to travel, to the Department of Politics and International Relations at the University of Kent for a crucial sabbatical term, to members of the American Politics Group of the UK Political Studies Association who offered sharp criticism and support at its annual conferences, and to the staff, especially Sue Wedlake, at the U.S. Embassy in London who are so supportive of American Studies in the United Kingdom. The Embassy also provided research assistance and access to the U.S. Department of State's International Visitor Program. The editorial team at Palgrave, New York, helped pull the book together and their anonymous reviewer provided incisive comments and helpful suggestions. I would particularly like to thank the following individuals who have had a direct and positive influence on the manuscript: Edward Ashbee, George Conyne, Amanda Gosling, Jane Hindley, David Houghton, Anthony King, Desmond King, David McKay, Colin Sampson, Michael Smith, Maurice Vile, and the interviewees who gave their time generously. The faults are, of course, mine alone.
