Title: Nature, smells, and human wellbeing

Table S1. Sociodemographic/economic characteristics of the study participants. Individuals ( $N=194$ ) were recruited via a social research company, and were selected purposively to maximise the diversity of backgrounds and perspectives across the British population.

Appendix S1. Focus group protocol

- Begin: What was your general impression of this woodland?
- Ask participants to discuss the attributes they noticed
  - Ensure all participants take turn (do not have to list everything)
  - Ask for reasoning behind each answer
  - Try to focus on natural elements. If non-natural elements are mentioned (e.g. fences, people, cars), that is okay as long as both natural and non-natural elements are covered in discussion
- If conversation takes off on various aspects, leave to develop
  - Probe on particular aspects of biodiversity participants notice
  - Probe on reactions to these aspects (e.g. valence)
  - If they give general answer, try to ask for more details. Use questions below as possible prompts if necessary:
    - What stood out for you?
    - What do you think was missing from the woodland?
    - What did you find that you weren't expecting?
    - What elements do you personally look for in this kind of woodland?
    - Are some elements more preferable in the woodland?
    - Are some elements less preferable in the woodland?
    - Are some woodland elements associated with more positive emotions? Which?
    - Are some woodland elements associated with more negative emotions? Which?
    - Was there something others noticed that you wish you had? Why?
    - Was there something you noticed but wish you had not? Why?
    - Is there anything else you would like to mention?
- Take care to reduce intimidation and aggression in groups
- Close the discussion and thank participants
- Turn off audio recording
